Provost Perspectives

A newsletter from the Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs

This season, as we near the end of the legislative session, I am reminded of the importance of focusing on well-being – not just for ourselves, but for everyone in our University of Utah community. We are a resilient bunch, inspired by our commitment to the meaningful mission of education, but even the most stalwart need time to recover and recharge. While we relentlessly work toward the success of all of our students and the support of our faculty to advance our research and impact, I am mindful of the power of self-care. As spring break approaches, I hope you are able to take some time for renewal in ways that are beneficial to you — whether it is connecting with friends or family, enjoying some time in nature, or learning something new.

If you are looking for community connections, the Office for Faculty maintains a list of affinity groups that meet regularly for social and professional connection. Coffee, Cocoa and Tea with the Provost

In response to current questions on campus, I am hosting a series of visits to connect with faculty. These sessions, scheduled over the next several weeks, are small-group meetings intended to create an opportunity for open discussion and listening. After our first productive and insightful session last week, I look forward to further discussions in the coming days.

Marriott Library welcomes new collections

The Marriott Library has four new collections available campus-wide. The collections include a monthly journal dedicated to publishing the most significant research on climate change, the Elsevier ScienceDirect All-Access subscription, civil rights records from the Ford and Reagan presidencies, and conference proceedings from the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.
